The three essays in this volume give a graphic account of Indian Muslim festivals in the nineteenth century, as observed by the participants themselves. The majority of these participants were Hindus who added their own practices to these supposedly Islamic events. The French Indologist de Tassy adds his own pungent comments to those of his sources, thus providing in this volume a fascinating interplay of cultural perspectives. This is the first translation into English of this classic nineteenth-century French work.

De Tassy reveals how Muslims in India have adopted certain religious practices not found in other Muslim countries, which have no sanction in the Quran, and which often contradict Islamic scriptures. Besides Tassy's celebrated work, this volume also contains his reviews of the classic Observations on the Musulmauns of India, and Ja'far Sharif's work on Muslim customs, Qanoon-e-Islam. The translation from French into English by Professor M Waseem, is lucid and free flowing. Items Related to Muslim Festivals in India and Other Essays (Language and Literature | Books). Just like other festivals in India and the world, Easter is also celebrated with much fervour and great religious solemnization in different parts of the country. Celebrated during Spring, Easter celebrations in India are distinguished by various colourful decorations, dance and plays, simmel and plum cakes, and bright lanterns adorning the streets. On this day, worship to God is performed to seek his blessings for the new year. It is in a way the end of winter and beginning of spring which means agricultural cycle for farmers. The dates are set according to solar cycles, unlike other Hindu festivals where dates are decided by lunar cycles. People celebrate this day by flying kites and having savory Bajre ki khichdi and sweet til ladoo. Gujaratis celebrate this festival by the name of Uttarayan. This festival commemorates the Hijra (or Hegira) in 622 CE when the Prophet Mohammed (pbuh) moved from Mecca to Medina. This was the beginning of the growth of Islam into a world faith. The Muslim calendar counts dates from the Hijra, which is why Muslim dates have the suffix A.H. (After Hijra). There is no specific religious ritual required on this day, but Muslims will think about the general meaning of Hijra, and regard this as a good time for "New Year Resolutions". The Quran uses the word Hijra to mean moving from a bad place or state of affairs to a good one - and so Muslims m
