

Irish Protestant identities

Edited by

MERVYN BUSTEED, FRANK NEAL AND JONATHAN TONGE

Manchester
University Press

Manchester and New York

distributed exclusively in the USA by Palgrave Macmillan

Contents

List of tables	page ix
List of figures	xi
List of contributors	xiii
Acknowledgements	xix
List of abbreviations	xxi
Introduction	1
Mervyn Busteed, Frank Neal and Jonathan Tonge
I Aspects of ascendancy	11
1 The memory of 1641 and Protestant identity in Restoration and Jacobite Ireland	13
John Gibney
2 Ascendancy insecurities: cross pressures on an eighteenth-century improving landlord	28
Mervyn Busteed
3 Last of their line: the disappearing Anglo-Irish in twentieth-century fictions and autobiographies	40
Deidre O'Byrne
II Coping strategies in a changing Ireland	53
4 "Survival of the fittest": Protestant dissenting congregations of south Munster, 1660–1810	55
David J. Butler
5 Protestants and politics in the Republic of Ireland: is integration complete?	70
Bernadette C. Hayes and Tony Fahey
6 "If a house be divided against itself that house cannot stand": the Church of Ireland and the political border, 1949–73	84
Daithí Ó Corráin

III The gender dimension	97
7 Gender, faith and power: negotiating identity in the mission field Myrtle Hill	99
8 The Church of Ireland diocese of Ferns, 1945–65: a female perspective Catherine O'Connor	113
9 Assessing an absence: Ulster Protestant women authors, 1900–60 Naomi Doak	126
IV Religion and identity	139
10 Visible differences: the 1859 revival and sectarianism in Belfast Mark Doyle	141
11 Evangelicals and Irish identity in independent Ireland: a case study Patrick Mitchel	155
12 “No, we are not Catholics”: intersections of faith and ethnicity among the second-generation Protestant Irish in England Sarah Morgan and Bronwen Walter	171
V The overseas context	185
13 Ulster Presbyterian immigration to America James E. Doan	187
14 Ulster transplanted: Irish Protestants, everyday life and constructions of identity in late Victorian Toronto William Jenkins	200
15 “What satire would be more eloquent than reality?” Reporting the northern unionists in the French press, 1919–22 Ian McKeane	221
VI Identity and culture	233
16 Identity and victimhood among Northern Ireland border Protestants Hastings Donnan	235
17 Scenting the paper rose: the Ulster-Scots quest for music as identity Fintan Vallely	247

18	The evolution of Ulster Protestant identity in the twentieth century: nations and patriotism Thomas Hennessey	257
VII	The Orange tradition	271
19	Pride before a fall? Orangeism in Liverpool since 1945 Peter Day	273
20	The contemporary Orange Order in Northern Ireland Jonathan Tonge and James W. McAuley	289
VIII	The Protestant working class: political and paramilitary representation	303
21	Duck or rabbit? The value systems of loyalist paramilitaries Lyndsey Harris	305
22	A weapon in the struggle? Loyalist paramilitarism and the politics of auto/biography in contemporary Northern Ireland Stephen Hopkins	319
23	Containment and the politics of loyalist-based conflict transformation Brian Graham	334
24	The Northern Ireland Labour Party and Protestant working-class identity Aaron Edwards	347
25	The Protestant working class and the fragmentation of Ulster Unionism Graham Walker	360
26	Unionist identity and party fortunes since the Good Friday Agreement Neil Southern	373
	Index	385

Southern Protestants plus their socio-economic, political and religious interactions more. Historians in southern Ireland, who examine the interaction of religion with social and political policy, tend to fixate on the Roman Catholic Church. Southern Protestants plus their socio-economic, political and religious interactions within wider society are often ignored.Â -"Clare wonderfully illuminates the degree to which Shaw's Irish identity remained the great constant in his protean career." Fintan O'Toole, The Irish Times. Irish Protestant Identities. Book Â· January 2008 with 6 Reads. Publisher: Manchester University Press.Â Catholic districts show on average significantly lower educational performance than Protestant districts. However, accounting for other sociocultural characteristics qualifies the role of religion for educational production. The evidence suggests that Catholicism is harmful only in a conservative milieu.