Drawing with Children is subtitled "A Creative Method for Adult Beginners, Too." and while I don't consider myself a beginner, it's been years since I've done any drawing and I could definitely use some skill development and practice. Mona Brookes suggests that to draw well, we need to be more observant of the 5 kinds of lines that things are composed of: dots, circles, straight lines, curved lines, and angles. We still have some more to do from lesson 1, including some warm up games and exercises and then a drawing where we pull together all the shape drawing practice we've been doing. It'll be interesting to see how both of our drawings progress in the weeks and months to come.

Founded on the belief that any child can learn to draw realistic pictures using her "alphabet of shapes" while in a noncompetitive environment, Mona Brookes' easy-to-follow, lesson-by-lesson approach to drawing has yielded astounding results with children of all ages. This new edition includes two additional chapters explaining how to reach children with learning problems or special needs and how to incorporate drawing into other subjects, such as math and language. 4 people like this topic.
