Rene Magritte might have painted a very simple picture for The Son of Man. There are some interesting things that made this more meaningful than just showing a guy who seems to be taking a picture while an apple exactly blocked his face as it fell down. In my opinion, as most paintings have a very vague explanation nowadays, it shows that man is not perfect as seen on the inverted elbow, and that means we have our imperfections in life as the son of man. The reason why the picture is named son of man and why the apple is there is probably because of a type of biblical reference. Magritte painted The Son of Man as a self-portrait. The painting consists of a man in an overcoat and a bowler hat standing in front of a short wall, beyond which is the sea and a cloudy sky. The man's face is largely obscured by a hovering green apple. However, the man's eyes can be seen peeking over the edge of the apple. At the start of 1946 Margritte was painting in both his realist style and his impressionist style. Some of his work, like The Son of Man were already headed toward more extreme colors. This extreme style, closer to some of Van Gogh's paintings, would accelerate in late 1947 when he was invited to hold his first solo exhibition in Paris at the Galerie du Faubourg in May 1948. The study concludes that the "Son of Man" concept in the selected texts not only includes a reference to the eschatological saviour, judge and defender, but also creates a sense of Jesus' solidarity with his fellow human beings. Such an understanding would certainly have led to Jesus' exaltation by his followers, who lived under conditions of social turmoil in the Graeco-Roman world of the first century, and would lead to such an exaltation by those who experience similar circumstances in Africa today. Jesus is called the Son of Man. This title of Jesus has many meanings that refer to both Jesus' humanity and divinity. By using Son of Man for himself Jesus could simply have been stressing the fact that he is truly human. This seems to be the way the expression is used in chapters 2-5 of the Book of Ezekiel in which the prophet is formally addressed as "son of man" over and over. Like the rest of us, Jesus is a son of Adam, and therefore he is our brother. He received his human body from Mary. As a man, Jesus knows what it means to be happy, pleased, and surprised as well as lonely, frustrated, tempted, and in pain. He can sympathize with us. As St. Hugh pointed out, the best doctor is one who has been sick.

Nevertheless, if the use of the tradition of the totem in the Targum and in the NT converges, then one could argue for an early provenance for the tradition. 23 Chilton (Isaiah Targum, 13) suggests that it refers to a king of the Gentiles, but this is not clear from the text. 24 Jastrow, M., A Dictionary of the Targum, The Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi, and the Midrashic Literature 1 (New York: Traditional, 1950) 313-14. 25 Jastrow, Dictionary of the Talmud, 887. 26 Cf. Glasson, "Ensign of the Son of Man", 300. There is a tantalizing echo of the totem symbolism in the action of the popular Messiah Simon bar Giora, during the war of 66-70 AD (BJ 4.503-8). This Simon clearly made claims to kingship (אֲדָמָה, אֲדָמָה, אֲדָמָה» BJ 4. 510). "Son of man" - perhaps the most famous painting of Rene Magritte.
