It uses techniques that are common in group and family therapy, but with an individual patient, to resolve conflicts that manifest in a "family of self" within a single individual. The concept of segmentation of personality has been around for many years, and that of ego states was highlighted by the psychoanalyst Paul Federn. The creation of ego-state therapy is attributed to The Watkins trace their theory to Federn's concept of ego states, although they acknowledge that they have given this term new meanings. John Watkins states that most of his own clinical work has been with multiple personality disorder (MPD or dissociative identity disorder), whereas Helen Watkins' clinical practice consists mostly of non-MPD mental health professionals, who see her for "marathon" series of 10 to 15 hours of sessions over the course of one weekend. The Watkins contend that multiplicity exists on a continuum, and their concept of ego states refers to a broad category
