The Hispanic/Latino naming dispute is an ongoing disagreement over the use of the ethnonyms "Hispanic" and "Latino" to refer collectively to the inhabitants of the United States who are of Latin American or Spanish origin—that is, Latino or Hispanic Americans. The usage of both terms has changed to adapt to a wide range of geographical and historical influences. The term "Hispanic" was used first; later, some Hispanics in the western United States came to prefer the term "Latino". The Census does not Latin American Identity Terms Explained. What is Latin America? Who is Latin American? What's really funny is there is no Latin America and thus no latino/x identity without Haiti - even if we're being narrow and defining latinidad exclusively based off a Spanish colonial heritage we got that down the whole island for nearly 2 centuries (officially) belonged to Spain then the western half was ceded to France for only about one century whose.
