The definitive book on friendship quilts, Remember Me: Women & Their Friendship Quilts is an intimate portrait of eight nineteenth-century quiltmakers. The lives of these women are all different, yet they are all shaped by birth, death, religion and war. Many of the women in this book, like Sarah S. Evans on her farm in Ohio, Betsey Wright Lee in a clapboard house in Connecticut and Fannie Cord Harris in her rock house in Kansas, were strong -- survivors despite their tragedies and hardships. Others, like twenty-two-year-old Ellen Spaulding Reed in the Wisconsin wilderness and thirty-eight-year-old Mary Ann Spaulding in the Ohio wilderness, were blind to the mindset of their opposite-sex friends; because females generally were not attracted to their male friends, they assumed that this lack of attraction was mutual. As a result, men consistently overestimated the level of attraction felt by their female friends and women consistently underestimated the level of attraction felt by their male friends. Men were also more willing to act on this mistakenly perceived mutual attraction. These results suggest that men, relative to women, have a particularly hard time being "just friends." What makes these results particularly interesting is that they were found within particular friendships (remember, each participant was only asked about the specific, platonic, friend with whom they entered the lab).
