The immediate causes of the current crisis in socialism are the highly authoritarian and extremely hierarchical political and economic structures created by Leninism. Yet the collapse of state socialism also appears to be part of a more general crisis of socialism, a crisis that includes even its potentially more democratic variants.<sup>12</sup> It is important to note here that success in becoming a socialist party in terms of internal organization and programmatic commitments is by no means equivalent to achieving electoral victory as one. Twentieth century socialism is moribund. In the Americas, socialist-oriented movements were dealt severe blows by the electoral defeat of the Sandinistas in 1990, the general impasse of Central American revolutionary movements and the crisis of Cuban Communism with the collapse of the Soviet Union. Radical grass-roots movements as Judith Hellman noted in a previous anniversary essay, have by no means disappeared in the Americas, but those that enunciate socialist goals are few and far between. <sup>1</sup> Can socialism be reborn? And if so, what might it look like?

Revolutionary socialism is the socialist doctrine that social revolution is necessary in order to bring about structural changes to society. More specifically, it is the view that revolution is a necessary precondition for a transition from capitalism to socialism. Revolution is not necessarily defined as a violent insurrection; it is defined as seizure of political power by mass movements of the working class so that the state is directly controlled or abolished by the working class as opposed to the World crisis: essays in revolutionary socialism; Item Preview. remove-circle. TREVOR RAYNE examines the crisis. Furthermore, Fidel Castro's intervention in the global debate about socialism is the most creative and thorough defence of Marxism-Leninism in the midst of barely disguised liberalism and revisionism everywhere. For this Castro and Cuba are vilified in the bourgeois press. Imperialism knows what it is doing: for 30 years it has sought to destroy the Cuban revolution. The beliefs in evolutionary socialism are often acquired in the same manner as are customs, habits, and traditions. (All socialisms are anti-traditional in the deepest sense, of course, but it is the method of evolutionary socialism to operate within the inherited framework even as it is being altered.) There are three main elements in evolutionary socialist tactics. One of the Fabian Essays described the process this way: The factory system, the machine industry, the world commerce, have abolished individualist production; and the completion of the co-operative form towards which the transition stage of individualist capitalism is hurrying us, will render a conformity with social ethics, a universal condition of tolerable existence for the individual.4.
