The British imperial history is definitely a castle of old-fashioned scholarship, their study segregated from mainstream British history, its professionals resistant to participating with new approaches coming from the outside "such as feminist scholarship, postcolonial cultural research, social background, and black history." With the end of the American Civil War the African American people became clear of slavery and supposedly free to be residents of the nation like everybody else does. However, as anyone who recognizes anything about American background, this was clearly false.
