I have been invited to speak on one or more occasions at roughly 120 institutions of higher education in Austria, Canada, China, Denmark, England, France, Germany, India, Israel, Japan, Korea, Russia, Spain, and the United States. Roughly a third of those invitations were "named" lectures or conference keynote addresses.

Rogers Smith (born September 20, 1953) is an American political scientist and author noted for his research and writing on American constitutional and political development and political thought, with a focus on issues of citizenship and racial, gender, and class inequalities. Born in Spartanburg, South Carolina and raised in Springfield, Illinois, Smith graduated with a B.A. in political science from James Madison College, Michigan State University in 1974, including study abroad at the University of Rogers M. Smith is the Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of Pennsylvania and chair of the Penn Program on Democracy, Citizenship, and Constitutionalism. He has previously served, with Joanna Vecchiarelli Scott, as vice president of the APSA. He can be reached at rogerss@sas.upenn.edu. Conversations host Harry Kreisler welcomes Rogers M. Smith, Professor of Political Science at the University of Pennsylvania, for a discussion of political ideals and political realities in American history. He highlights the importance of building community and political identity by assembling coalitions around narratives that appeal to a broad audience while shaping policy agendas. Professor Smith compares the leadership of Lincoln, Reagan and Obama in addressing these tasks.
